

CONTRIBUTORS

DUNCAN WATTS is a principal researcher at Microsoft Research and a founding member of the MSR-NYC lab. Prior to joining MSR in 2012, he was a professor of sociology at Columbia University (2000–2007), and then a principal research scientist at Yahoo! Research, where he directed the Human Social Dynamics group.

PHILIP GOODMAN is assistant professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of Toronto, Mississauga. His research focuses on prisons, punishment, race, rehabilitation, and penal labor, and his work has appeared in Social Problems, Theoretical Criminology, Working USA, Canadian Journal of Law and Society, and Law and Society Review.

NAOMI GERSTEL is Distinguished University Professor and Professor of Sociology at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. In addition to the topics explored in her recent book (coauthored with Dan Clawson; see below), she also analyzes inequalities in extended families, organizational compliance with family policies, and familial involvement with college students.

DAN CLAWSON is the coauthor (with Naomi Gerstel) of Unequal Time: Gender, Class, and Family in Employment Schedules (Russell Sage Foundation Press, 2014). He teaches sociology at the University of Massachusetts Amherst and is also the author of The Next Upsurge: Labor and the New Social Movements (Cornell University Press, 2003).

DYLAN RILEY is associate professor of sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, and the author of The Civic Foundations of Fascism in Europe: Italy, Spain, and Romania 1870–1945 (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2010). His work has been translated into German, Russian, and Spanish. He is also a member of the editorial committee of the New Left Review.

JUAN J. FERNÁNDEZ is assistant professor of sociology at University Carlos III of Madrid. His research focuses on public attitudes, social inequalities and policy diffusion. He is currently studying the global diffusion of abortion liberalization and social class differences in positive attitudes about redistribution.

OLIVER HAHN is assistant professor of organizational behavior and strategy at the Tepper School of Business, Carnegie Mellon University, Pittsburgh. His research explores organizations and behavior in the entertainment, sports, and food industries.

EZRA W. ZUCKERMAN is a professor at the MIT Sloan School of Management, where he holds the Nanyang Technology University chair, serves as head of the Behavioral and Policy Sciences area, as faculty head of the MIT Sloan PhD Program, and as codirector in the economic sociology PhD Program.

ELENA OBUKHOVA is assistant professor of strategy and organization at the Desautels Faculty of Management, McGill University. Using her expertise as an economic sociologist (PhD, University of Chicago), she explores the role of social networks in labor markets and entrepreneurship with particular attention to China.

JIAYIN ZHANG is assistant professor at Tsinghua University School of Economics and Management. She received her PhD from the MIT Sloan School of Management, where she has been trained as an economic sociologist. Her current projects include examining the contextual factors that shape collective misperception of others' beliefs and assessing its influences on economic and organizational outcomes.